Urban Building Projects extend Millercare to make showroom more spacious and comfortable

TWO Warrington businesses have come together to make life easier for the elderly and disabled. Urban Building Projects Ltd has built an extension at Millercare on Manchester Road, which will increase the range of mobility scooters, rise / recline chairs, profiling beds and wheelchairs.

Julie Kitson, manager at Millercare, said the extension would ensure customers have even more space and comfort when they visit the showroom.

"So many people think they cannot get about anymore, but they just need to know what products are out there to help them," she said.

"Our bigger showroom will mean that we can now stock a better range of products so our customers will have even more choice."

Urban Building Projects Ltd specialise in domestic and commercial building and started the extension work at Millercare on February 23.

The company's mission is to deliver a high standard of work at competitive prices and give complete client satisfaction every time.

Urban Building Projects Ltd are based in Hatton, Warrington and operate throughout the north west.

Managing director Carl Palmer said his company won the contract after it was put out to tender.

He started his business seven years ago and now employs 23 time served tradesmen – including his wife, Nichola, who looks after the accounts and administration.

"We work alongside most of the architectural companies in Warrington," he said. "We class ourselves as one of the finest building companies in Warrington working on extensions to the highest of quality and exceptional attention to detail."

Urban Building Projects worked with DV8 Design on the Millercare extension. DV8 Design specialises in building design and concept development, from small private residential to large commercial projects.

Millercare offers freedom, independence and a better quality of life by providing mobility and healthcare equipment to those who need it.

The company has been serving the north west for nearly 60 years. Employing 51 members of staff, Millercare has developed from a small family business and now has eight branches across the region serving customers from Cheshire, Greater Manchester, Lancashire and Cumbria but retains its local roots with its business in Warrington.

By visiting the store customers can find a wide range of mobility, healthcare and household products aimed at making life easier, from scooters and stair lifts to recliner chairs and ramps.

Julie said: "We offer experience as well as a friendly and caring service which includes individual assessments with customers in their homes or at the shop on Kingsway North, Warrington."
